

《China Buzz: Pain in the neck for giraffe moving home》

Moving to a new home can be a pain in the neck. That's the case for an 8-year-old giraffe named Changqing, moving from Ji'nan Wildlife World, Shandong Province to Zhangqiu, Henan Province. Watch out for those the trees and electric wires. A zookeeper was designated to stick up for him.

Moving to a new home can be a pain in the neck. That's the case for an 8-year-old giraffe named Changqing, moving from Ji'nan Wildlife World, Shandong Province to Zhangqiu, Henan Province. Watch out for those the trees and electric wires. A zookeeper was designated to stick up for him.

Is there a thirsty dragon up there? At least three waterspouts were spotted off the coast of Dalian in Northeast China's Liaoning Province on Friday. Cellphone footage captured by a citizen shows a black vortex rising up into the clouds. Chinese call waterspouts "a dragon sucking water". But experts believe they're just tornadoes over water.

How do you like them apples? For the first time outside its home country, the French Apple Art Festival was staged in Shanghai during the National Day holiday.

More than 1,000 fresh apples provided the canvas for international celebrities, classic paintings and famous architecture. All exhibits were produced in France and flown to Shanghai. Just don't bite the Mona Lisa.